Vice Chancellor Beth Rushing
University of Washington, Tacoma
Box 358430

Dear Beth:

Based upon the recommendations of the Faculty Council on Academic Policy, the Faculty Council on Tri-Campus Policy has recommended approval of an option in Politics, Philosophy, and Economics within the Bachelor of Arts degree in Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences. A copy of the proposal is attached.

I am writing to inform you that the Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences program is authorized to specify these requirements beginning autumn quarter 2009 and thereafter.

The new requirements should be incorporated in printed statements and in individual department websites as soon as possible. The General Catalog website will be updated accordingly by the Registrar's Office.

Sincerely yours,

Mark A. Emmert
President

EXPLANATION OF AND RATIONALE FOR PROPOSED CHANGE

For new program, please include any relevant supporting documentation such as student learning outcomes, projected enrollments, letters of support and departmental handouts. (Use additional pages if necessary).

The key faculty members teaching in the current Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences' Politics and Values and Political Economy concentrations plan to combine these two concentrations into one: Politics, Philosophy and Economics (PPE). The Politics and Values and Political Economy concentrations will be eliminated and will be replaced with a new concentration, Politics, Philosophy and Economics. With this conversion, the faculty plan to combine resources and administrative duties, provide a more focused curriculum (a common set of core classes, similar requirements with different emphases, a common senior seminar class), encourage greater student activities, teach seminar classes, and work together on hiring priorities.

This new concentration combines the old concentrations of Politics and Values and Political Economy, but does so in a way that integrates the three disciplines of Political Science, Philosophy, and Economics. Three separate "tracks" will be offered within PPE (politics and philosophy; economics; and law and policy) which will offer students the opportunity to specialize in particular areas. The Politics and Philosophy track combines political science with philosophy, sociology, history, economics and policy studies. It provides an in-depth study of political theory, political and social interactions, relations between states and capital, and the history of relationships between governments and citizens. The program also aims to develop skills needed for an informed and effective citizenship at all levels. The Economics track emphasizes economic theory and reasoning. It provides a solid foundation for understanding how the interplay of economics and politics shape our everyday lives. Particular emphasis is placed on analytical and critical thinking skills and problem solving. Students in the Law and Policy track specialize in the more applied areas of politics and economics. This track focuses on understanding the role of law as an instrument of public policy. While it focuses primarily on domestic law and policy, it also provides a more philosophical understanding of the role of law in society, and a comparative understanding of the role of law in different societies. This track also provides classes in policy analysis skills applied to particular areas such as the environment and federal public policies.

In addition, this new concentration promises to develop closer institutional, pedagogical and research links between faculty with similar interests. They also plan to establish collaborative research and exchange opportunities with regional and international organizations.

See attached proposal for additional information.

Political Economy

The Political Economy concentration provides a solid foundation for understanding how economics and politics shape everyday lives and how we may shape them. Particular emphasis is placed on analytical and critical thinking skills. The concentration exposes students to how and why markets, businesses and government work, and how institutions, politics, technologies and social structures interact with the functioning of markets. Students also analyze economic problems in the United States and overseas and identify policies addressing these problems.

Politics and Values

The study of political and social change provides a basic foundation for the active citizen in the 21st century. Drawing on the disciplines of political science, philosophy, sociology, history, economics, cultural studies and policy studies, this concentration examines political processes by emphasizing the role of values and social movements. This concentration prepares graduates to pursue careers or further study in government, law, planning, nonprofit and community work, international non-governmental organizations, social activism, journalism, business, teaching and other fields of endeavor. Concentration graduation requirements

Requires 65 credits total.

Some of the courses below are in more than one list; however, a course can only be used to satisfy one requirement.

Conversion of Politics and Values and Political Economy into One Concentration (Politics, Philosophy and Economics)

Faculty: Turan Kayaoglu, Michael Forman, Rachel May, Amos Nascimento, Charles Williams, Katie Baird, 2 new hires 2010-11.

Rationale: Combine resources, provide a more focused curriculum, combine administrative duties, encourage greater student activities, teach seminar classes, agree on hiring priorities. Develop closer institutional, pedagogical and research links between faculty with similar interests.

Changes: A common set of core classes, similar requirements with different emphases, a common senior seminar class. We are also adding a Law and Policy track. Seek to establish collaborative research and exchange opportunities with regional and international organizations.

Issues: Do we have too many core classes, all of which are 200 level courses? Do we want a methods class to be required? Do we offer the required classes often enough to make it reasonable that students can satisfy the requirements?

Some Possible Hiring Priorities:

Law and Philosophy
Ethics and Economics
Growth and Distribution/Labor Economics
State and Local Government
Comparative Politics

Catalog Description

Politics, Philosophy and Economics (PPE)

This concentration combines work in Political Science, Philosophy, Economics, Policy and Law. It provides students with an in-depth interdisciplinary foundation in political theory, states and markets, and to philosophical and ethical issues related to politics, economics, and public policy issues. Particular emphasis is placed on developing critical thinking and writing skills.

Career Options

Politics, Philosophy and Economics prepares students for careers in government, law, public agencies, business, nonprofit management, diplomacy, community work, or journalism. It also prepares students for advanced studies in law, journalism, international relations, public policy, international development and other social sciences.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will be able to:

- Discuss and write critically about significant historical and/or current events and developments.
- Discuss and write critically about political and economic theories and ideologies both in their own terms and in terms in which they emerged.

- Understand and explain the operation and importance of the principal political institutions of the United States and the international system.
- Understand how contemporary events and trends such as globalization and the emergent human rights regime are the product of long-term developments in institutions.
- Possess a theoretical understanding of economic and political forces in the world, and as such will be better equipped to make sense of current and historical events and current policy debates.
- Develop analytical frameworks so that they will be able to identify and evaluate the tradeoffs associated with current policy debates, such as free trade or social security reform, and will be able to develop reasoned and informed opinions about these issues.
- Understand and appreciate the historical process of economic and political change, and the factors that have led up to such changes around the world.
- Understand graphical and statistical analysis.
