Re: Program Changes for NELC Minor and Languages and Civilization

Hi Janet,

Thanks for checking in on this. Yes, we anticipated the bottle-neck issue you mentioned and will offer the Gateway course every winter quarter, since a lot of students transfer that quarter as well. This way, winter transfers won't have to wait a whole year for it to be offered (if we went the "Offered: A" route). The enrollment numbers provided were an estimate and we will have to see what adjustments we need to make to it after offering it at least once in the near future. There are many things to take into consideration, such as the actual time/days to offer the course and what schedules work best for the faculty. Thankfully, the Times Schedule Office has not had any trouble finding us a large room in the past--we've had large lecture rooms in Kane Hall as well as Savery, so hopefully this won't be an issue in the future, though you're right, it is something to be aware of.

For now, NEAR E 101 is the only gateway course that we would like to list, however, as the large-scale changes take effect and we see how things progress over time, we may be able to add another course to this list as well. We've tried to prepare ourselves in this regard as well by requesting a new "Special Studies" course at the 100-level (NEAR E 196), which we could use to develop additional Gateway courses in the future (in addition to other objectives for the NEAR E 196 course). However, since we were under certain departmental deadlines, NEAR E 101 is the only one that we all stand behind for now at this initial stage.

Please let me know if there are other questions regarding this or other issues elsewhere in our package, and thanks again for checking in!

Hello Mahdi,

I am doing some follow-up from our last A&S Curriculum Committee meeting. The committee wanted to make sure that NELC only wants to have one gateway course (NEAR E 101) for the minor and for Languages and Civ? Sometimes offering only one gateway course once per year can cause a bottleneck and it can be difficult to get a classroom that will seat 150. Do you want to consider adding NEAR E 150 as a second gateway course or perhaps offer NEAR E 101 twice per year? Any decision the department makes is fine – we just want to make sure you have a heads up about the potential problems. Can you check this out with the chair and let me know?

Languages and Cultures Major—72 credits (was 69)
Form 1503: Explanation and Rationale for Proposed Changes
May 2014

BACKGROUND: The Department of Near Eastern Languages and Civilization has put together a comprehensive package covering changes across our entire academic unit to be effective Summer Quarter 2015. One of the central components of our proposal is the revision of curriculum numbering system in the various language prefixes, as well as the NEAR E prefix. We have also applied for several new language prefixes and are proposing to retire one (HEBR). This application updates the references to specific courses where they appear in the catalog requirements for the program named above. These catalog changes are coordinated to be effective in Summer Quarter 2015, concurrently with the new course numbering schemes as well as the new prefixes so that a smooth transition can occur from the old to the new in Autumn 2015. It is the hope of the NELC faculty that proposing the changes as a single package will provide a clearer picture of our curricular goals and the reasoning behind the changes.

Currently, we offer students four major degree options, all of varying credit requirements ranging from 69-73 credits (all will be 72 credits in the new model): A) Languages and Civilization; B) Culture and Civilization; C) Hebrew Bible and the Ancient Near East; and D) Comparative Islamic Studies. The first option emphasizes the language component, the second less so. The third and fourth differ entirely.

CHANGES: We would like to change the name of the major from "Languages and Civilization" to "Languages and Cultures" because we feel that the term "culture" is more encompassing and descriptive of the sorts of courses offered in NELC. Nevertheless, this major option will continue to be more language-centered and will steer students into specific areas of study. Since cultural learning is a major component of language acquisition, the new title better characterizes the degree option. This major also proposes significant changes to the structure of its requirements (summarized below). One of our primary goals is to increase commensurability between the different majors we offer.

Student demands and increased enrollments are driving the need for a 100-level "gateway" course that properly introduces students to the Department. That same demand is also driving the need for more large introductory courses at the 200-level, and so we are expanding our inventory in this section and have adjusted the requirements to this Program to reflect these changes (please see attached degree planning worksheet).

Additionally, we have increased the requirement for advanced language study from 9 credits to 10 credits because our language courses are all going to be 5 credits at the advanced level (currently, they vary between 3-5 credits).

The Program now requires a Senior Seminar course (2 credits) on methods. This course will not only cover issues of methodology, but also cover linguistic, philological, literary critical, rhetorical critical, etc. topics. The course will have a practical application in career building in that it will help students to prepare their resumes/curriculum vitae.

A final new requirement for all of our major options is the addition of a residency requirement. All students are now required to have at least 22 of the 72 credits required for the degree in-residence at the Department.
